

Discovery, but it's produced by Rick Berman...

- Burnham is wearing a catsuit.
- Instead of being Spock's adopted sister, she's the distant cousin of Data's creator.
- Stamets is heterosexual.
- Saru is a comic relief character, whose antics often make the crew laugh, like when they find ganglia in their soup.
- The main conflict is not with the Klingons, but with a species we've never heard of before and no one cares about. (But they have nice forehead bumps.)
- The conflict starts in the pilot, but then, it's completely forgotten until the end of the season. Then, after a cliffhanger two-parter, it gets forgotten again for a year.
- The main premise is abandoned after episode #3 and the rest of the show is just a rehash of the TNG format.
- Half the episodes are directed by actors from TNG or Voyager.
- The Borg, the Ferengi, the Bolians, the Talaxians, the Hirogen, the Cardassians and the Douwd all make an appearance, which is then explained as "not getting into the records".
- The show tackles such hot and important socio-political topics like the Falklands war, Gorbachev's glasnost politics, and women's right to vote in Switzerland.
